ATIEL & UEIL release “Lubricants & Greases End of Life: Sustainable Best Practices”

5th June 2025

ATIEL & UEIL Joint Sustainability Committee (JSC) are pleased to announce the release of a new document “Lubricants & Greases End of Life: Sustainable Best Practices”. The document was presented today at the 2025 ATIEL Technical Seminar in Brussels, where it was formally introduced by Joris Van der List, Shepherd of the Downstream Working Group of the ATIEL & UEIL JSC.

The ATIEL & UEIL JSC is dedicated to advancing the sustainability efforts of its members by providing practical guidance and actionable insights. A key objective of this initiative is to empower members of both associations, as well as the wider lubricants industry, to enhance their lubricant end-of-life programs as part of broader sustainability initiatives. Given the dynamic nature of sustainability-related developments, this paper outlines current best practices while also providing links to online resources that are updated more frequently to reflect emerging trends and regulatory changes within the lubricants industry.

The chapters investigate evolving European regulatory frameworks and also delve into how to develop key strategies for sustainable and circular lubricant portfolios, look at encouraging sustainable raw material sourcing as well as giving specific advice across a range of different lubricant applications. By leveraging the insights presented in this document, the lubricants industry is encouraged to strengthen sustainability strategies, contribute to circularity, and drive industry-wide improvements in lubricant lifecycle management.
